

All We Can Save Reading Guide

1. How did your Climate journey begin?
2. What do you think it means to be a Climate Feminist? Is that a label you identify with?
3. Do you feel welcome in the Climate movement? What, if anything, has kept you on the sidelines?
4. If we are at a crossroads of peril and promise, where do you see possibility alive and growing?
5. Section 3 of this book focuses on advocacy. What insights in this section challenge your thinking about what we need to or can do?
6. As you consider the climate crisis, what language/story do you want to leave behind or lean into?
7. What makes for productive conversations about climate change, and what impedes them?
8. What about the climate crisis do you find hard to face? What makes it so hard?
9. How is the climate crisis challenging the meaning of home? How might we redefine it?
10. Section 6 is all about persistence. What do you find to be critical fuel for persistence? Where/how do you get it?
11. Has the climate crisis impacted your choices about or experiences of parenthood, or with children in your life? How so?
12. Section 8 is a more hopeful section that focuses on Nourishment. Which solution in this section captured your attention or imagination?
13. Of the many “re-” words in Louise Maher-Johnson’s poem, is there one that reflects how you connect with Earth’s living systems? Why?
14. Did any part of this book make you feel seen? Which part, and how?